

Tipper creates music for the finest sound systems; bass fueled glitch that demands to be played at high volumes to unleash it's lethal potential. With influences ranging from drum and bass, to trip hop through downtempo electronica, Tipper has created his own eclectic brand of devastating dance-floor tracks that have been admired for being “streaks ahead” and “expertly crafted” productions, whilst being “frightening yet refreshing...if it doesn't move you check for a pulse.” Not surprisingly this unique and effective sound is in high demand.

In addition to releasing his new downtempo album "Broken Soul Jamboree" during the Spring/Summer, 2010 sees Tipper return to touring and performing with increasing frequency. Having recently completed the musical score for a Canadian film documentary, and with another surround sound project in the pipeline (fitted somehow around a hectic series of US tour dates) fans everywhere are pleased that Tipper is back to his busy best.
